SHELTER PROGRESS RAPID

The national civil defense program of surveying fallout shelters for up to 60 million Americans is ahead of schedule, and should be completed before the end of 1963, according to officials of the Defense Department's Office of Civil Defense.

By October 1 OCD expects to have in the hands of local civil defense authorities complete information on the number and location of shelter spaces available in each community.

From information obtained by the Federally-financed National Shelter Survey, local civil defense officials will know also how many persons in each community could be sheltered, how many could not be sheltered under present conditions, what additional space could be modified into shelter areas, how much it would cost, and similar data. Local architects and engineers surveyed shelter areas under contract to the Army Corps of Engineers or the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Under present plans, civil defense authorities receiving this information would then be responsible for marking shelter areas with a nationally-standardized sign. They would stock shelter areas with specially-prepared 14-day supplies of food, water, sanitation and medical items, and fallout detection instruments—all provided by OCD.

The shelter survey, marking, and stocking program, announced last August and put in operation Dec. 1, 1961, is the first part of a broader plan to provide fallout shelters for virtually all Americans over the next five years.

Home Ownership Up In Appomattox County

(Special to the Times-Virginian)

NEW YORK, June 18 — In Appomattox County, home ownership has been on the rise and is now at a high level.

A greater proportion of local families own the houses in which they live than at any previous time. The ownership ratio is well above that given for the rest of the United States.

The findings are from reports just released by the U. S. Department of Commerce, based on data gathered during the recent Census of Housing.

They show that 66.8 percent of all dwelling units in use in Appomattox County are owned by their occupants, compared with 61.9 percent in the United States and 61.0 percent in the South Atlantic States.

Much of the progress in this direction took place in the last few years, aided by general prosperity and by Government mortgage underwriting.

The steadily rising consumer incomes and the increased availability of mortgage money at favorable rates stimulated many people to acquire homes of their own.

The figures show a total of 2,424 occupied dwelling units locally, of which 1,621 are owner-occupied.

In Appomattox County, as well as in most communities in the United States, property owners have been spending more than usual in the last ten years for the upkeep and improvement of their homes.

The Census Bureau states that the average expenditure on a one-family house was $283 in 1960 and that the total spent by American home owners in the year was over $13 billion.

Locally, such overall solid advances have been made since 1950 in the physical condition of dwellings. The level was mixed, in addition, through the replacement of some old houses with new ones.

The housing census lists a large proportion of local dwellings, 1,025 out of a total of 2,595, as being "sound" and equipped with all modern plumbing facilities.

Residential property values in Virginia have gone up considerably in the last ten years, the average being 63.6 percent. In the state, the effect has been to raise owner-occupied, non-farm dwellings to a median market price of $10,800.
